

A stylish young snob from the east arrives at Maplehurst and merely to pass the time away makes love to Pauline, who takes it all seriously.

The snob goes east and extends to Pauline an invitation to visit him at his home. The moth flies into the flame, and her wings are singed. A year later she gives birth to a child, and the snob casts her off and goes west. Bad influence and pressure are brought to bear to force Pauline into an immoral life. She is about to give up in despair when she hears that her uncle has died, leaving all to Dick. The first thing Dick does is to look her up and offer to take Pauline back to his home, forgiving and forgetting everything.

In the meantime the west has made a man of the snob, and, realizing what he had done, he comes east, willing to atone for his mistake by taking Pauline back. He really falls in love with Pauline and his own baby, but Pauline refuses him and returns to Dick, the man who always believed in her and proved true blue.

GROCCERS BLAME SPECULATORS FOR RISE IN GRAIN PRICES

Jugglers in food prices yesterday wriggled and twisted and succeeded in throwing a cover of darkness over the investigation of the rising price of wheat.

President Caleb H. Canby, of the Board of Trade, visited the offices of District Attorney Chas. F. Clyne and defended the grain speculators and the big elevator interests. He passed the buck to the farmers and said they were holding.

At the same time the big fellows received a wallop in the shape of a resolution passed by the National Association of Retail Grocers urging the federal authorities probe the cost of wheat.

In the resolution the grocers held that in their opinion the wheat gamblers were responsible for the high prices:

The resolution is as follows:

Whereas, The recent advance in the price of wheat has caused an advance in the price of flour, and

Whereas, An advance in the price of bread is thereby threatened, and

Whereas, It is a matter of record that the wheat crop of 1914 was one of the largest ever harvested in the United States, and

Whereas, It is claimed that wheat held at present in the United States is of sufficient quantity to make the present high price unwarranted, notwithstanding the unprecedented demand for export, and

Whereas, We are of the opinion that speculation in wheat is more directly responsible for its value than actual supply and demand, therefore be it

Resolved, That the executive committee of the National Association of Retail Grocers demands that the United States government, through the regular channels of the department of commerce, at once start an inquiry into the true causes of this unprecedented condition with a view to placing the responsibility where it justly belongs and to prevent any further rise already predicted by those engaged in wheat speculation.
